Re: Brick Wall Queries

THE MARRIAGE DATE AND THE BIRTH DATES OF THE CHILDREN BORN IN SWITZERLAND ARE ALL RECORDED IN :

Registres de l'etat civil, 1798-1812
civil registration of births, marriages, and marriage publications, deaths for Champoz, Bern, Switzerland.

I have a copy of Leopold and Suzette's marriage record, which gives her parents names. Father was Jacob Siegrist and mother was Susanna (looks like Bulimont, not sure as this is all written in French.)

I hope this helps you some. Leopold was my great grandfather's brother, so I don't have a complete history on this family.

Sincerely.........

Marlene Schaffner

The third annual Girod reunion was held Sept 21, 1941 at the home of Mr. & Mrs Carl Wise near Van Wert, Ohio, with 77 present.

After a delicious dinner, a short business meeting was held followed by a program.

New officers elected: for president, James Borders, secretary-treasurer - Harriet Springer. The 1942 reunion is to be held at the Hanna-Nuttman Park near Decatur.

The following program was given:

Quartette: Herbert Girod, Nora Healey
Forest Girod, Ethel Inwood
Violin Solo - Laverne Gantt
Recitation - Phyllis Girod
Guitar & Harmonica Duet - Jim Borders
Ernest Girod
Readings: Hallie Marie Girod, Mrs. Dale Ferris & A. E. Brian

Another event of the afternoon was a bean guessing contest. Prizes were given by Amos Girod to Mrs. Herbert Girod and Rex Davis.

The interesting feature of the afternoon was a recording machine - owned & operated by Amos Girod.

Appointed to be on the program committee were - Nellie Ferris, Florence Brian, Amos Girod.

Re: Brick Wall Queries

THE MARRIAGE DATE AND THE BIRTH DATES OF THE CHILDREN BORN IN SWITZERLAND ARE ALL RECORDED IN :

Registres de l'etat civil, 1798-1812
civil registration of births, marriages, and marriage publications, deaths for Champoz, Bern, Switzerland.

I have a copy of Leopold and Suzette's marriage record, which gives her parents names. Father was Jacob Siegrist and mother was Susanna (looks like Bulimont, not sure as this is all written in French.)

DEAR LORNA, THANKS SO MUCH FOR THE INFO ABOUT LOUIS, SEVERAL YEARS AGO I FOUND THIS CIVIL WAR FILE AND COULDN'T GET THE CONNECTION TO LEOPOLD. I MUST HAVE MISSED HIS BIRTH RECORD ON THE FILM FROM SWITZ.

NOW TO THE PICTURE... DO YOU RECOGNIZE ANY OF THESE PEOPLE? I THINK THIS WAS TAKEN IN 1941. I'VE ALSO SENT THE MINUTES OF THE REUNION, SO YOU CAN GET AN IDEA OF WHO WAS THERE. I'VE INHERITED THE FAMILY REUNION MINUTES BOOK, INTERESTING. IT'S AMAZING TO ME THAT OLIVER (MY G-GRANDFATHER) AND LEOPOLD'S FAMILIES MANAGED TO STAY IN TOUCH BACK THEN.

IF YOU WOULD, WRITE THE NAMES ON THE PAPER COPY OF THE PICTURE AND RETURN IT TO ME, I WOULD APPRECIATE IT A LOT. YOU MAY KEEP THE PHOTO COPY AND THE CIVIL WAR COPY, IF YOU LIKE.

I DON'T KNOW HOW FAR BACK YOU ARE GONG WITH THIS GENEALOGY THING, SO I ALSO SENT THE FAMILY SHEET WITH ALL THE SIBLINGS.

THANK YOU FOR YOUR TIME....

Speak vows

Lori Ann Dealey and Greg G. Davis were united in a double-ring marriage ceremony April 10 in the United Methodist Church of Convoy. Rev. Gary Exman and Rev. Byron Dealey officiated.

The couple are the children of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Dealey, Convoy and Mr. and Mrs. Rex Davis, Grover Hill.

The church was decorated with hurricane lamps on the pews, with white bows and greenery, lilies around the altar and gladioli and carnations on the altar.

Linda Hoblen, organist and Nancy Flickinger, soloist, presented the nuptial music.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents, wore a white silk bridal gown with train, high collar with lace, long sleeves in chiffon and lace with lace trimming around the bottom of the gown. Her veil was chapel length with lace border and beads, gathered in a headpiece of beads and lace. She carried a cascading bouquet of all pink roses and baby's breath with white ribbon.

Her maid of honor was Marsha Dealey, of Convoy. She wore a pink chiffon dress, formal length with pink English derby hat with a veil. She carried a hurricane lamp with flowers arranged around the candle.

Bridesmaids were Shelly Dealey and Rosina Thatcher of Convoy; Donna Wannemacher and Tammy Dinning of Payne and Deb Klopfenstein of Haviland. They were all identically attired to the maid of honor and carried similar lamps.

Jennifer Tressler of Bryan was the flower girl. She wore a pink chiffon dress and carried a lace fan with a white basket. She had flowers in her hair.

Doug Dealy of Convoy was the ring bearer, wearing a silver tux with tails, a pink shirt and a pink carnation boutineer.

Performing the duties of best man was Kelvin Davis of Haviland. Ushers were Rob Davis, Les Hockenberry, Ron Miller and Mike Priest of Grover Hill; Rich Miller of Scott, Mark Dealey of Convoy and Tony ~~Tressler~~ of Camden, Mi. Kuster

Immediately following the ceremony was a reception for 400 guests in St. John's Catholic Hall.

Servers were Julie Peas of Payne; Linda Tayl and Leslie McClure Grover Hill and Sher Roth of Ft. Wayne.

The couple took honeymoon trip Freeport, Bahamas.

The bride is a graduate of Wayne Trace High School and is employed by Allen Travel Service in Ft. Wayne. Her husband is also a Wayne Trace graduate. He is employed at Herbert E. Orr's in Paulding.

Lori Dealey Honored With Bridal Shower

A bridal shower was held on Sunday in honor of Lori Dealey, bride-elect of Greg Davis. It was hosted by Rosina Thatcher and Margy Dealey in the home of the latter.

Games were played and gifts won by Darlene Wurm, Nina Dealey, Janis Plummer and Tammy Crone. The gifts were presented to the honored guest.

Decorations were carried out in the bride-elect's chosen colors of pink and lilac.

Cake, ice cream, punch, nuts, mints and coffee were served.

Others in attendance were: Judy Dealey, mother of the bride-elect; Marie Davis, mother of the prospective bridegroom; Nina Dealey, grandmother of the bride-elect; Donna Wannemacher; Sheila Roth; Julie Pease; Phoebe Davis; Jackie Roth; Sally Craft; Marsha Dealey and Sally Dealey, both sisters of the bride-elect; Alice Knueve; Marguerite Roth, and Annette Dealey.

Those unable to attend, but sending gifts, were: Nancy Flickinger, Marsha F. Dealey, Ursula Mohr, Sheryl Roth and Violet McClure.

The Twenty-Third Psalm

The Lord is my Shepherd: I shall not want.
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures:
He leadeth me beside the still waters.
He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name“s sake.
Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil:
for thou art with me: thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies:
thou anointest my head with oil:
my cup runneth over.
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

Noted physician practiced 43 years in city

Former American Physicians and Surgeons Association President Dr. Lawerence Shinabery, 90, died Sunday in Health Care of Westminster Village, Muncie.

The Grover Hill, Ohio, native practiced medicine in Fort Wayne for 43 years, retiring in 1967. He moved to Muncie five years ago.

The national association was formed in 1943 in Lake County for the purpose of "protecting the public from inferior medical care under government interference." At its convention in 1949, it expanded its objectives to "oppose socialism in any form."

Shinabery served as the group's treasurer for two years and took over its presidency in October 1950.

He also was a member of the Fort Wayne Medical Society, Indiana State and American Medical associations, and Fort Wayne Academy of Medicine and Surgery. He served on the staff of St. Joseph Medical Center.

He was founder of A-1 Products in Kendallville in 1941.

Surviving are his wife, Isabelle; daughters, Sally Osterman of Grabill and Peggy Armstrong of Fort Wayne; son, Lawrence B. of Fort Wayne; sister, Lois Ann Smith of Fort Wayne; half-brother, Woodrow Rhodes of Coldwater, Mich.; 14 grandchildren; 25 great-grandchildren; and three great-great-grandchildren.

Services are 10 a.m. tomorrow in Noffze Funeral Home, Alexandria, where calling is 3 to 8 p.m. today. Burial will be in Park View Cemetery, Alexandria.

Carrie Celebrates Her 88th Birthday

Mrs. Carrie Elston was honored for her 88th birthday last Sunday, with a basket dinner being held at the log cabin in Welcome Park at Grover Hill. Her birthday was the preceding day.

Two beautifully decorated cakes, as well as much other delicious food, were enjoyed by those attending the celebration. Several others having birthdays falling in the month of March were mentioned, and Mrs. Elston presented each with a card and small gift

There were fifty-seven friends and relatives for the dinner, with some thirty-four additional callers in the afternoon, all wishing Carrie many more happy birthdays and years of health. Three of her sons were present: Earnest, of Addison, Mich; Lewis, of Antwerp, Ohio; and Roy, of Van Wert. Daughters, Mrs. Flossie Struble, of Columbus Grove, and Ruth Gudakunst of R.R. 1, Cloverdale, were also present. Other communities represented by persons at the get-together were Ft. Wayne, Ind.; Uniopolis, Ohio; Bluffton, Middle Point, and Grover Hill.

Mrs Elston has 42 grandchildren; 93 great-grandchildren; and 5 great-great-grandchildren. The best wishes of the entire Grover Hill-Roselms community go to Carrie on this happy occasion.

Shooting a suspect leaves mark on police

By Amanda Iacone
The Journal Gazette

Nearly 12½ years ago, Fort Wayne police officers P.J. Smith and Jon Noll were involved in a shooting that left a mentally unstable man dead.

Smith and Noll were part of the Emergency Services Team that tried to prevent Leroy Ross-Church from killing himself. During attempts to tear-gas Ross-Church, he lunged at officers with a knife and continued to fight despite being hit by numerous bullets.

Nine shots were fired that December night in 1992 – a night neither Smith nor Noll will ever forget.

Many factors affect how officers cope with the grief and stress of events such as the Ross-Church shooting. But they will be changed by the experience, said Paul Whitesell, a trained psychotherapist who has worked with police departments nationwide on crisis management and is now superintendent of the Indiana State Police.

Before moving to Indianapolis, Whitesell was a member of Fort Wayne Police Chief Rusty York's administrative staff. Whitesell was a firearms instructor at the Fort Wayne Police Academy and also provided police-oriented therapy services to city officers.

In the past month, three other area officers have joined Noll and Smith among the small group of law enforcement officers who understand what it means to shoot at a civilian.

On Tuesday, Indiana State Trooper Lionel "Andy" Smith, who is not related to Fort Wayne officer P.J. Smith, shot Clayton Bolding in the head during a trafton's record in the State Department, Minority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., said.

Frist had only eight years of Senate experience when he succeeded Lott, and some colleagues felt he was more Bush's choice than that of the GOP caucus. He was bound to need more White House help than did up-through-the-ranks predecessors such as Lott and Dole, they said, but sometimes Bush seemed to dump tough problems at his door and walk away.

"Bush makes Frist's job much more difficult than it need be," said ongressional scholar Thomas Mann of the Brookings Institution. Renominating the filibustered even without any consultation or ccommodation ensured a major attle on judicial nominees, one rist could win only by taking own the Senate as a unique institu- on." As for Bolton, Mann said: The Bush White House's insis- nce on information-control has isoned the relationship with ongress. … They hung Frist out to y."

White House spokesman Scott McClellan rejects ch comments. "It's Democratic leaders who have osen the path of blocking nominees," he said in an terview Friday. As for the Bolton documents, he said, hey have what they need. It's not about documents, 's about partisan politics."

Bush has acted like "a spectator on the scene who kibitzes but doesn't use his real muscle" the way he does on legislative priorities such as tax cuts, said Bruce Fein, a constitutional lawyer who served in the Reagan administration.

Eric Ueland, Frist's chief of staff, said editorial writers and outsiders do not appreciate how difficult it is to lead the Senate.

"It's sloppy and simplistic to blame the president every time things get tough in the Senate, when by its very nature the job of majority leader is like walking across hot coals as other members throw kerosene on your feet while carrying just a couple of ice cubes in your hands," Ueland said.

Gary Jacobson, a congressional and presidential authority at the University of California at San Diego, said last week's events "remind us that it's hard to lead the Senate. These are a bunch of fairly independent prima donna types for the most part," and "Frist's tools for keeping them in line are quite modest." But Bush sometimes hinders Frist, Jacobson said, by picking sharp-tongued, contentious nominees such as Bolton and leaving it to the GOP leaders to figure out how to get them confirmed.

"That's the way Bush operates," said Jacobson, who is writing a book on the president. "He knows what he wants, and he goes for it. He thinks he's right, and if it causes problems for someone else, so what?"

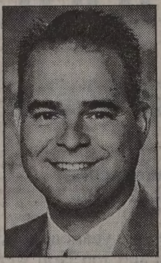
THE WEEK AHEAD

The change of wind



Curtis Smith

WPTA-TV's chief meteorologist

The other day I was lying in the sun. It was during one of the nice stretches of weather this week. The sun was out, and the temperature was in the lower 70s.

Most of that afternoon, there was a cool breeze, but for a few minutes it calmed down, and the sun started to warm my face. After a minute, the wind picked back up, and for the first time I could ever remember, I felt something that I had always known to be true. Normally, when a cool breeze hits me, it simply feels like cool air; for some reason, probably the tranquility of the scene, this time it was different. I felt like the wind actually removed the warmth from my body, and that is how wind actually works. It might not feel that way often, but wind does remove our body heat from around us and replace that warm layer with cold air. Our bodies then have to expend more energy to stay warm, even on 70-degree days.

Weather wise: These principles, when combined with winter weather, are the reasons that a wind-chill factor applies to living things and not inanimate objects. Things that aren't alive don't have the layer of warmth to begin with.

Councilman Gary Norton Jr. said city leaders understand why supporters are so attached to the memorial wall, and he would like to see it moved so the building can be sold without demolishing the tributes.

But "my commitment has always been and still is to progress," he said.

"The reality is that we're short on revenue," Norton said. "We're really struggling to provide for our residents' basic services. I mean police and fire."

Incorporated in 1911, East Cleveland was once wealthy. In the early 20th century, the street where the wall now stands was known as "Millionaires Row." It was lined with mansions, belonging to the likes of John D. Rockefeller who wanted to escape bustling Cleveland with its steel mills and factories. East Cleveland offered a tree-lined, lakeside getaway.

Shooting

fic stop outside Angola. Smith reached into Bolding's truck to turn off the ignition but Bolding continued, allegedly dragging Smith with him, state police said.

On April 21, two Fort Wayne officers shot and killed Tony Jenkins in a home on Winter Street while he was stabbing a woman he had taken hostage. Jenkins died at the scene, and the shooting remains under investigation.

For Fort Wayne police Capt. P.J. Smith, Dec. 5 is a day that he often tries to take off work or go on vacation. But to Noll, the anniversary of his first and only police-action shooting is just like any other day; he said he doesn't think about the shooting unless someone asks him about it.

Noll, now a sergeant, speaks to Fort Wayne Police Academy recruits about his experience. Smith has declined to speak to the police students.

Noll stayed with the Emergency Services Team and is now second in command of the highly trained group also known as a SWAT team. Smith, however, said he quit the team in the months after the shooting because he needed to move on.

Their responses to the same event – as different as night and day – are considered normal. That the officers remain with the department could be considered out of the ordinary because about half of all police officers involved in police-action shootings quit the force within seven years, Whitesell said.

Recovering from stress

The effects of such shootings can have lifelong repercussions for the officers involved. Whether it's called battle fatigue or post-traumatic stress syndrome, the grief, pain and stress are the same, said Chaplain Mark Dodd, of the Indiana State Police.

Officers these days are no longer told to "suck it up and deal," Dodd said, but are given help in the form of counseling and time off after such high-stress events.

Police, paramedics and even dispatchers involved in these situations are brought together to meet in groups soon after a shooting, usually within a week, to piece together the facts of the episode. Then the group wades through the emotions revolving around the event, Dodd said.

"It helps people to understand that in most cases everything was done that was humanly possible in that situation," he said of the debriefings.

Recovering from a traumatic situation is a process, and sometimes officers need more time and counseling beyond the group debriefing to help them cope, Dodd said.

Smith still seeks counseling, he said, from local clergymen, his friends and family, and from York, his colleague-turned-boss. Talking has helped Smith to cope with the stress and repercussions of that night.

Noll, although willing to talk, said he does not talk much about that night.

He didn't seek out his parish priest or other clergy. He did turn to his family for support and confirmation that he did a good job that night. He also quickly returned to work and vowed to make sure that he would always be mentally and physically prepared in case there is a "next time," Noll said.

"You never quite know how an officer will be affected," Whitesell said.

Some will sleep too much; others can't sleep. Some will have a great need to talk about the event; others won't say much about it for the rest of their lives. Some officers will seek company; others, seclusion. Some will have recurrent dreams and some won't have any dreams at all.

They will second-guess their own actions and decisions. And many contemplate the theological and moral issues of taking another life, Whitesell said.

Officers also struggle with the media attention, the departmental scrutiny and second-guessing by the public.

Police-involved shootings typically receive heavy media coverage. Even when reported well, the facts are often sketchy, and the officers involved can't speak to the details or on their own behalf because of the ongoing criminal investigation, Whitesell said.

The media turn to the neighbors, witnesses, the victim's family and community leaders – all of whom are able to give their side of the story, but who weren't necessarily there at the time and who have never been near a similar incident, Whitesell said.

If department brass come forward too soon and call a shooting justified, that can further enrage a community, which will then spill over into media accounts, he said.

Not being able to give their version frustrates officers. And negative comments from community members can leave the officer feeling betrayed, Whitesell said, which is why so many officers leave law enforcement altogether. They feel risking their lives and reputation is not worth a $40,000-a-year salary.

Often the community's viewpoints emerge while the officers involved are on a three- to five-day paid leave because of the shooting. Although the time off is not considered a disciplinary measure, officers often see it as punishment, Whitesell said.

The days off also give the officers time to think about what happened – something neither Noll nor Smith wanted to do after the shooting. Both showed up for Emergency Services Team training just two days after the event.

Noll wanted to get back to work as soon as possible, but he said he has never been one to just sit around.

Smith, however, took several days off after the Emergency Services Team training day. The department didn't have a mandatory leave time in those days, Smith said.

In the mid-1990s, the Fort Wayne Police Department instituted a mandatory minimum of five days' leave. Before then the leave time was optional, said Capt. Tom Rhoades, who heads the department's office of professional standards.

Time is another factor that works against officers. When they return from the leave, the criminal and internal investigations into the shooting continue, sometimes for months.

Immediately after the shooting, Noll faced a battery of questions from Fort Wayne detectives, the police union attorney, the state police and eventually the FBI, he said

Nationwide, a grand jury typically convenes about three months after such an event to determine whether those involved will face criminal charges, Whitesell said.

In Noll and Smith's case, a grand jury in 1993 cleared the police department of any wrongdoing in the shooting.

Public scrutiny needed

All that public scrutiny is not necessarily a bad thing, said the Rev. Mike Nickleson, of the Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance, a group of ministers that joined forces with the NAACP and the Urban League in the mid-1990s to ask for and get a federal investigation into allegations of excessive use of force by Fort Wayne officers.

The results of the federal investigation, which concluded in 2000, revealed no prosecutable practices.

Nickleson acknowledged that police-action shootings change the officers involved. And he hopes such events make everyone involved more sensitive to the value of life. Because of the prevalence of violence in society, young people have become desensitized to death, he said.

Most people don't consider how the officers feel and the officer's side of the story isn't one that is often told, Nickleson said. Members of the public should understand that police put their lives on the line and deserve respect. But respect works both ways, he said.

Regular dialogue between police and community members, he said, is needed to enable police to do their job: protect society. Dialogue after a crisis won't help make any positive changes such as increasing neighborhood watches and community coordination, he said.

The city police department has been making changes since the mid-1990s to improve relations with the community. But officers today, who receive cultural diversity training during the police academy, must understand the cultural and religious perspectives of those they serve, Nickleson said.

"They work for us," he said.

Battle-ready

Many officers have been "seasoned" in the military before joining a law enforcement agency, which can help an officer in high-stress situations, Dodd said.

But for Noll, police shootings are nothing like battle when soldiers shoot at the enemy without ever knowing whether they've injured or killed anyone.

"Police are accountable for every action," Noll said.

When officers go through the police academy, they are trained to shoot more than once and keep shooting until they stop their aggressor, not necessarily to kill them, Noll said.

In Noll's case, Ross-Church leapt out of a utility closet brandishing a butcher knife above his head and charged at a group of Emergency Services Team members. Officers had just tear-gassed the room, but it seemed to have no effect on Ross-Church, Noll recalled.

Fearing for his life, Noll began firing from his 9 mm service gun. Just one bullet was not enough to stop the adrenaline-pumped suspect.

Noll fired six shots and Smith fired three, which grazed Ross-Church, before the troubled man was stopped, Noll said.

In the aftermath of that 1992 shooting and the recent police shooting on Winter Street, some members of the community have questioned why police couldn't have shot Ross-Church or Tony Jenkins in the foot or arm to disable them.

Officers are trained to aim for the center of the torso to increase their chances of hitting their target and to increase their chances of stopping the aggressor, said Sgt. Robert Girod, a Fort Wayne police detective who has been involved in two shootings and has investigated several others.

Shooting someone in the arm or foot can further anger the person, Girod said. In Girod's first police-action shooting, the driver of a pickup truck shot Officer Stephen Haynes in downtown Fort Wayne. Girod and Haynes' partner, Jon Bonar, opened fire on the truck as it drove away. The driver was killed after the shots hit him in the back.

The second shooting was a movie-style gunbattle involving Girod and Detective John Moreno and a group of professional bank robbers who outgunned the two detectives. A bullet grazed Girod's leg, but Moreno was not injured.

Girod cites his training for helping him to react appropriately in both situations. When Haynes was shot in July 1993, Girod recognized from training films the situation unraveling before him.

No matter how well trained officers are, they can never train for every scenario, Whitesell said. Nor can they understand how they might react until they've gone through a high-stress experience.

"Unless you've ever been there and forced with the urgency of the moment, you don't know exactly what you would do," he said.

Noll said that officers can and should be prepared for a shootout. He urges young officers to practice with their sidearm more than the required four times a year. They should also be in top-notch shape physically, he said.

Even though less than 2 percent of police ever fire their weapon, young officers should be mentally prepared as well, Noll said.

He tells recruits to visualize how they would react, what they would do.

When Noll joined the department, he figured he would retire without ever having to fire his gun. Now he goes to target practice and works out regularly to be prepared in case there is a next time, he said.

Smith also never thought he would have to fire his weapon, but the 1992 Ross-Church shooting changed that. It also changed every aspect of Smith's life, he said.

It brought him closer to God. He held newfound respect for his wife. He became friends with people he never would have met if it weren't for his struggle to understand why a man had to die that night.

Today, he doesn't worry much about what will happen to him tomorrow or the next day, Smith said. He figures that God will lead him in the right direction.

Although he has tried finding work outside of law enforcement, he stayed with the department and believes that is where he is supposed to be, for now, Smith said.

Noll isn't ready to stop yet, either. His whole life he wanted to be a police officer and one bloody night in a kitchen on Greene Street hasn't changed that, he said.

In fact, he doesn't believe the Ross-Church shooting changed him much at all. He has the same values, beliefs and goals as he when he walked into that apartment.

If anything, he said, the shooting only reaffirmed his desire to be a police officer.

Woman dies after driving pickup

Emergency workers converge at the scene of a fatal pickup-train accident on Airport Expressway west of Bluffton Road on Saturday.

A woman died Saturday afternoon after she drove her pickup truck into the side of a freight train on the south side of Fort Wayne, police said.

Marian E. Girod, 48, was westbound on the Airport Expressway just west of Bluffton Road when her white Ford pickup truck struck the side of a train at about 2:30 p.m., police spokesman officer Michael Joyner said.

Police

When police officers arrived, Girod was in critical condition, Joyner said. When Paramedics arrived they declared her dead, Joyner said.

Witnesses told police she was traveling at a high rate of speed, he said. Other cars were stopped at the intersection and the train was going 23 miles per hour, he said.

Girod hit the side of the engine on the 80-car train, and her car spun around, Joyner said. The crossing has flashing warning lights but does not have gates.

Police were also initially concerned because Girod had struck one of the train's gas tanks, but a railroad crew was able to stop the leak quickly, Joyner said.

The Airport Expressway was closed between Bluffton and Baer roads for several hours, and Lower Huntington Road was blocked by the train after the accident.

Girod is the wife of Fort Wayne Police Detective Sgt. Robert Girod.

Officer thanks all for warm support at funeral

On behalf of my family; my son, Bobby; and myself, I would like to thank the officers of the Bluffton Police Department, the Wells County Sheriff's Department, the Indiana Department of Natural Resources Law Enforcement Division, the Indiana State Police and my other brothers and sisters in law enforcement for their support and assistance with traffic control for the funeral services of my wife, Marian Elizabeth (Mimi) Girod.

The friendship demonstrated by the nearly 600 friends and family members who attended the viewing, the funeral or sent flowers would have overwhelmed Mimi, as it did our family.

I want to express my appreciation to all of the out-of-state law enforcement officers who called, wrote, or sent flowers. And for my students, the members of the Bluffton Church of the Nazarene, the Fort Wayne Zone Churches of the Nazarene, their pastors and all who made memorial contributions to WBCL, 90.3-FM, on behalf of my wife.
